New Jersey High School Journalism Teacher Awards Program

PROGRAM INFORMATION

The New Jersey Press Foundation will select one New Jersey High School Journalism Teacher of the Year in 2008.

The program identifies outstanding high school journalism teachers and school publication advisers who have done exemplary work in the 2007-2008 academic year.

Applications and supporting materials must be postmarked by April 30, 2008, and sent to:

New Jersey Press Foundation
840 Bear Tavern Road, Suite 305
West Trenton, NJ 08628-1019

THE AWARD

The 2008 New Jersey High School Journalism Teacher of the Year will be the official nominee of NJPF to the National High School Journalism Teacher Awards Program sponsored by the Dow Jones Newspaper Fund.

The teacher will be offered fellowships to attend two journalism seminars sponsored by the New Jersey Press Association through May 31, 2009. In addition, the teacher will be invited to bring one student with him/her to the seminars, at no charge to the teacher or the student.

The 2008-2009 seminars are expected to cover topics such as copyediting and headline writing.

SELECTION PROCESS

An advisory panel comprised of former national and state High School Journalism Teachers of the Year and officials of the New Jersey Press Foundation will review the applications.

They will weigh each teacher's service in local, state and/or national organizations, personal awards, the quality of their students, their philosophy and approach to student press rights and ethics.

All applicants will be notified of their status by June 1, 2008.
